

22nd November, 1963.

Dear Norman,

Thank you for your letter of the 14th which I have read with interest. As you will have seen, I have had a lot to say about computers, automation, programme controls and the rest in some recent speeches. I enclose a copy of what I said at Scarborough and also my latest speech in the House.

I was very concerned about what you say about flight-testing which seems extremely important and I will get those of my colleagues who specialise in these matters to study your letter and go into this question.

Yours sincerely,
